Lettre d'information des études mongoles et sibériennes n°26

13 octobre 2021

Chères et chers collègues,

Un nombre croissant de cours, colloques et séminaires sont maintenant accessibles à tous.

La Société des études mongoles et sibériennes vous propose de vous envoyer périodiquement les actualités de la recherche sur les études de cette aire géographique (événements, publications, nouveaux membres, soutenances de thèse et d'HDR...).

Ces actualités ne sont absolument pas exhaustives et dépendent de ce que nous recevons, donc n'hésitez pas à nous faire parvenir les informations que vous souhaitez diffuser à l'adresse suivante : isacharleux@orange.fr

Nous vous invitons également à consulter périodiquement le Site des Études mongoles et sibériennes : <https://etudesmongolesetsiberiennes.fr/>, sur lequel vous pouvez retrouver toutes les Lettres d'information : <https://etudesmongolesetsiberiennes.fr/lettre-sems/>.

N'hésitez pas à nous envoyer votre cotisation pour soutenir la Société des études mongoles et sibériennes, qui a notamment pour objectif de publier la collection « Nord-Asie », d'aider les jeunes chercheurs et d'organiser des manifestations sur la Mongolie et la Sibérie.

Bien cordialement,

Isabelle Charleux

Présidente de la SEMS

The meeting will be a presentation of the volume "800 Years Qaraqorum: Art, Power, Cultural Exchange in Medieval Eurasia", which collects the papers prepared for a Symposium originally planned at the University of Vienna (2020) to celebrate the 800th anniversary of the foundation of Qaraqorum. As the capital of the United Mongol Empire Qaraqorum constituted one of the most important centers for political and diplomatic activities of the Medieval Mongols. Even in subsequent periods, the symbolic importance of this city, set it at the center of wars and disputes for supremacy within and outside the Mongol imperial lineage, thus determining its decline and progressive destruction which culminated in the 14th century. The variegated history of Qaraqorum, a multicultural city at the core of Mongolia, has interested scholars for decades. The volume gathers selected contributions in the fields of history, art history and archaeology, to discuss the ways and peculiarities of cultural exchange under the patronage of the Medieval Mongols. Further, it offers the platform to reflect on how material culture moved and shaped and connected various societies in Eurasia in the 13th and 14th centuries.

Morris ROSSABI is Associate Adjunct Professor at the Department of East Asian Languages and Civilizations at Columbia University, where he teaches courses on Inner Asian, East Asian, and Chinese history. Author or editor of 25 books, he has helped organize exhibitions at the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the Cleveland Museum of Art, and the Asian Art Museum of San Francisco.

MIXING MEDICINES

ECOLOGIES OF CARE IN BUDDHIST SIBERIA

After the collapse of state socialism, Russia's healthcare system, much like the rest of the country's economic and social sphere, underwent massive restructuring, while the public saw the rise to prominence of a variety of nonbiomedical therapies. Formulated as a possible aid to a beleaguered healthcare infrastructure, or as questionable care of last resort, "traditional medicine" in post-socialist Russia was tasked with redressing –and often blamed for –the fraught state of the body politic, while biomedicine itself became increasingly perceived as therapeutically insufficient. The popularization of ethnically and culturally marked forms of care in Russia presents a peculiar paradox in a political context often characterized by a return to robustly homogenizing state policies. In a context where displays of cultural, religious, and ethnic difference are tightly woven with anxieties about Russia's status as a modern state, the rise of a therapeutic sphere that tended towards multiplicity, fragmentation, bricolage, and a certain ontological agnosticism in the treatment of bodies and subjects appears, at the very least, counterintuitive. Focusing on the therapeutic life at the peripheries of the state, in the Siberian region of Buryatia that unexpectedly finds itself at the forefront of projects of medical integration via a local tradition of "Tibetan Medicine," this talk explores how categories of official and unofficial medicine are co-constituted, and with what effects on conceptualizations of medical legitimacy, as well as on concrete ways of caring and curing.

Tatiana Chudakova is a sociocultural anthropologist with research interests in post-socialist healthcare, the politics of medical knowledge, and STS. Her first book, Mixing Medicines: Ecologies of Care in Buddhist Siberia (Fordham 2021) follows Russia's official medical sector's attempts to reinvent itself through state-led initiatives of "medical integration" that aim to recuperate indigenous therapeutic traditions associated with the state's ethnic and religious minorities. Based in Buryatia, a traditionally Buddhist region on the border of Russia and Mongolia known for its post-Soviet revival of "Tibetan medicine" and shamanism, the book traces the uneven terrains of encounter between indigenous healing, the state, and transnational medical flows. Her current research project tentatively titled A Sample of One: Self-Experimenting Publics and Citizen Science, analyzes practices and communities that speak to the scientific method from the fringes of legal and regulatory authorization, but nonetheless claim both methodological rigor and an ethical stance.

8-9 décembre 2021 : workshop franco-coréen: Mongol Studies at the Crossroads

Workshop of the Franco-Korean Research Network, 2021

“Mongol studies at the Crossroads:
Korean-French Perspectives”

Recently, Mongol Studies have received international attention and are actively engaged in worldwide academic exchanges and collective projects. Korea and France both have a long history of studying this region of the world, and up to now had few occasions to cooperate. The purpose of this workshop will be to help examine cross-cultural perspectives and identify new trends in Mongolian studies. This first encounter aims at starting a cooperation and federate a France-Korea network of specialists of Mongolia around common issues. It includes both senior and junior researchers as well as doctoral and master students, and values interdisciplinary research including history, anthropology, art history and linguistics.

Séminaire du CEMS-CNRS

30 novembre 2021 : Paul Shore : « A Jesuit among the Kalmyks »

Premier séminaire CEMS/GSRL de l'année 2021-22 :

Paul Shore (University of Regina, Saskatchewan, Canada) : « A Jesuit among the Kalmyks: Jan Milan, SJ and his Relatio cuiusdam Missionarii... anno 1700 »

Résumé

Jan (Joannes) Milan, SJ (1662-1737) was a Jesuit missionary of Bohemian background who travelled to Crimea in 1700 after several years of service at the court of Peter the Great. Milan wrote a Relatio of his encounter with Kalmyk culture there that includes several ritual incantations, which he transcribed into the Roman alphabet, and then translated into Latin. This manuscript, now in the National Library in Prague, is illustrated with examples of Kalmyk religious practices, warfare, music making and daily life. The Kalmyk alphabet, days of the week, and "Zodiac" are also presented. In addition, Milan provides some glimpses into the cultures of the Mordvins, Circassians, and Bashkirs, and provides an example of what he believes to be a "Mordvin" incantation that has yet to be translated.

This lecture will locate Milan's work in the context of Jesuit "proto-ethnology" in non-European cultures, while placing it in relation to the writings of Nicolaes Witsen and Andrei Vinus. We shall also consider how Milan balanced his roles as missionary and observer of culture while a guest among the Kalmyks.

Le séminaire aura lieu de 14-16h en salle 5.067, Bâtiment de recherche nord, Campus Condorcet - 14 cour des Humanités, 93322 Aubervilliers cedex.

Il sera également possible d'y accéder en ligne, sur inscription : isacharleux@orange.fr

Cotisation à la SEMS

La Société des Études mongoles et sibériennes

La Société des Études mongoles et sibériennes est une association régie par la loi du 1^{er} juillet 1901 et le décret du 16 août 1901, fondée par Roberte Hamayon en 2013. Elle a son siège au Centre d'études mongoles et sibériennes (54 boulevard Raspail, 75006, Paris). Depuis le 27 septembre 2019, elle est présidée par Isabelle Charleux, avec comme secrétaire Yann Borjon-Privé, secrétaire adjoint Dominique Samson de Normand de Chambourg, et trésorier Robin Toublan.

La SEMS a pour but de promouvoir la connaissance de la Mongolie et de la Sibérie (Asie septentrionale), rassembler les chercheurs spécialistes de ces régions, contribuer à la diffusion et à la valorisation de leurs travaux par des publications scientifiques et d'ouverture au grand public, par la mise au point d'une base de données électroniques et par des manifestations (conférences, événements culturels).

La SEMS contribue au financement de la collection papier Nord-Asie, supplément à la revue Études mongoles & sibériennes, centrasiatiques & tibétaines. Elle finance par ailleurs l'hébergement du site des Études mongoles et sibériennes.

Pour devenir membre de la SEMS (cotisation annuelle 20 €, étudiants 15 €), veuillez nous adresser à Robin Toublan : robin.toublan@gmail.com
